

IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
FOR THE WESTERN DISTRICT OF PENNSYLVANIA

WILLIAM ROBERT BILL,
Plaintiff

v. CIVIL ACTION NO. 05-154 ERIE

TROOPER VICTOR J. STERNBY,
Defendant

HEARING ON DEFENDANT'S MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT

Proceedings held before the HONORABLE
SEAN J. McLAUGHLIN, U.S. District Judge,
in Courtroom C, U.S. Courthouse, Erie,
Pennsylvania, on Thursday, June 29, 2006.

APPEARANCES:

STEVEN C. FEINSTEIN, Esquire, appearing on behalf of the Plaintiff.

MARY LYNCH FRIEDLINE, Esquire, Senior Deputy

4 Thursday, June 29, 2006, in Courtroom C.)

6 THE COURT: This is the time we've set for argument
7 at Civil Action 05-154 Erie, on defendant's motion for summary
8 judgment. I've had a chance to read the briefs, and equally 9 pertinently, I've had a chance to take a look at the tape.
10 Do you want to come up to the podium.

11 MS. FRIEDLINE: Thank you, your Honor. Good
12 morning, your Honor, I'm Mary Friedline with the Attorney 13 General's Office, for Trooper Sternby with the state police.

14 Your Honor, as you know, this case involves an 15 incident in which Mr. Bill, the plaintiff, fell and struck his 16 head in the course of a DUI arrest. He appeared from the tape
17 to pass out after about approximately 10 minutes from exiting 18 his truck. And the plaintiff himself has no recollection of 19 these events. The plaintiff's claim is essentially that the 20 trooper knew or should have known that he was highly 21 intoxicated and, therefore, should have taken precautionary 22 measures, stopped the field sobriety test, and not attempted a 23 preliminary breath test.

24 THE COURT: Could I interrupt you just for one 25 second.

1 MS. FRICK: Sure.

2 THE COURT: To see if there's agreement between you
3 and plaintiff's counsel on this point. And that would be the 4 conscience-shocking standard that governs this case. Do you 5 agree that given that it's somewhere between -- since it's 6 somewhere between instantaneous decision and the luxury of 7 being able to reflect for some period of time, like in a prison

8 with medical personnel, that it would likely be the middle 9 ground of gross negligence or arbitrariness sufficient to shock 10 the conscience?

11 MS. FRIEDLINE: That's been my position, your Honor, 12 and that's set forth in our brief.

13 THE COURT: Do you agree with that?

14 MR. FEINSTEIN: No, we don't dispute that that's the 15 standard.

16 THE COURT: All right, go ahead.

17 MS. FRIEDLINE: Your Honor, we've moved for summary
18 judgment essentially on two grounds. That the record does not 19 support the state-created danger theory claim. And, also, that 20 alternatively that this record establishes that the trooper in 21 any event would be entitled to qualified immunity with respect 22 to his conduct in this arrest.

23 THE COURT: Let's go backwards, because a lot of 24 times, oftentimes in cases like this the circuit, and they've 25 done it with me, they go right to the qualified immunity issue

1 first. So let's do it that way.

2 MS. FRIEDLINE: That's fine, your Honor. Your

3 Honor, I think this case is led by the recent Third Circuit

4 case in Smith_v._Marasco. In which that is exactly what

_____

5 happened. The court had already determined, I think on a prior

6 ruling, I call it Marasco_I in my brief, that there was a

_____

7 question of fact. At least as to willful misconduct for the 8 state-created danger, and possibly some of the other prongs.

9 But the court, nonetheless, went on to grant summary judgment

10 on qualified immunity in that case.

11 And in that particular case the court looked at the 12 Kneipp decision from 1996 and said what are the contours of the

13 right that was -- the constitutional violations that was

14 established in Kneipp, recognizing that that right has to be

_____

15 sufficiently clear so that a reasonable officer would 16 understand that he's violating the right.

17 Plaintiffs, I submit, have characterized the Kneipp

18 decision in what it held and what it said to officers as too

19 simplistic. As saying, essentially, that if you've got an

20 intoxicated person, you can't place them in danger. If you do,

21 you violated their constitutional rights.

22 Smith_v._Marasco looked at this quite carefully, and

23 citing back to the Third Circuit's previous decision in Rivas,
_____

24 developed and stressed the contours of what was being discussed

25 in Kneipp. And in that case what has emerged is essentially
_____

1 that a state actor may not abandon a private citizen in a

2 dangerous situation provided that the state actor is aware of 3 the risk of serious harm and partly responsible for causing or 4 creating the opportunity for that to happen.

5 THE COURT: Is that Marasco summarizing Kneipp?
_____

6 MS. FRIEDLINE: It's actually Marasco summarizing
_____

7 Rivas summarizing Kneipp. But they said basically what was
_____

8 happening, I think the dated issue in Marasco is 1999. So they
_____

9 said as of 1999 what has our law established as the contours of 10 this duty.

11 THE COURT: You can't abandon a helpless individual

12 whom you know or reasonably should know is helpless, in other 13 words?

14 MS. FRIEDLINE: And if you helped to create the 15 situation of the helplessness. That's essentially -- and what 16 we had in Kneipp, keep in mind was a woman who was clearly

17 drunk and for purposes of this case, we can say she's highly 18 intoxicated and so is Mr. Bill.

19 THE COURT: No doubt he was intoxicated.

20 MS. FRIEDLINE: Right. Certainly afterwards his 21 blood alcohol establishes that. But there is no doubt that the 22 officer at a certain point in time in the field sobriety test 23 suspected that as well, there's no question. I submit, and the 24 video shows, his passenger was in much worse shape.

25 THE COURT: He appeared to be.

1 MS. FRIEDLINE: Yes. And I wouldn't be here if the 2 passenger were the plaintiff in this case necessarily making 3 the same argument, your Honor.

4 THE COURT: Because of the level of intoxication

5 and, therefore, the increased danger?

6 MS. FRIEDLINE: Well, I shouldn't say that --

7 THE COURT: You just did.

8 MS. FRIEDLINE: I probably just put my head in a 9 noose. I think on a summary judgment I might have had a little 10 more pause arguing the man was falling down, unable to stand on 11 his own. He was yanked and held up by the officer. Now, I'm 12 not talking about the rest of the tape when he tried field
13 sobriety tests, but at least at the very beginning, and there 14 may be more issues there, potentially, as to whether he could 15 even stand and whether he should proceed with field sobriety 16 tests.

17 THE COURT: Cutting to the chase here, the law is, 18 of course these cases can come on in infinite variety, but when 19 all is said and done, do I take it that it's your position that 20 by virtue of the plaintiff's, by virtue of the absence of any 21 overt stumbling or falling or indicia that this individual was 22 a danger, a discrete danger to himself if left even momentarily 23 unattended, his fall was not foreseeable and, therefore, the 24 conduct could not be grossly negligent?

25 MS. FRIEDLINE: Yes, certainly going back to all of

1 the elements of the state-created danger, that's precisely 2 right.

3 THE COURT: Now, you say they didn't create the 4 danger, either. But isn't that -- assuming that there was a 5 danger, isn't that a little sophisticated, clearly they didn't 6 pour the alcohol down his throat, he did that. And he decided 7 to park the car where he did and fall asleep. He did that.
8 But they did get him out of the car and they did get him up on 9 his feet. And they did walk him to the police car. So absent 10 that happening, while something else even worse may have 11 happened, he may have decided to turn the car on and drive 12 away, but for the police, he would not have found himself in 13 front of the police car where he fell down?

14 MS. FRIEDLINE: In that very strict analysis of the 15 case, yes. However, I don't think that the Third Circuit in 16 Bright, when they stressed that this must be a case of misuse

17 of state authority and affirmative action to get that fourth 18 prong of state-created danger -- when you look at Kneipp and

19 you look at the cases that Kneipp grew out of, which were other

20 abandonment cases where a person's arrested, they leave the 21 passenger by the road and she gets raped; or a drag racer is 22 arrested and they leave the children in the car next to an 23 eight-lane highway; the abandonment, the affirmative action 24 there, I submit, can't compare with what happened here, which 25 is in the course of a lawful DUI arrest.

1 THE COURT: But to be sure, abandonment in the sense 2 that it's used in those cases, is simply one, albeit not the 3 exclusive indicia of conduct that can rise to the level of 4 conscience shocking. For instance, if you had a severely 5 disabled and drunken and stumbling individual that as soon as 6 you take him out of the car, he or she falls flat on his face.
7 The trooper gets him up again, has him do the field sobriety 8 test. He's doing that and he falls again. The trooper gets 9 him up again. And on the third fall he really falls and cracks 10 his head open. The requirement that he continue to do a test, 11 hypothetically, in the face of demonstrable evidence that he 12 was injuring himself while doing it, without assistance,

13 physical assistance from the officer, that's a functional

14 abandonment within the meaning of those cases, isn't it?

15 MS. FRIEDLINE: I disagree, your Honor. I really do

16 believe --

17 THE COURT: Wouldn't the scenario -- taking up on 18 your point that if you were here on the other guy, you're not

19 sure you would have moved for summary judgment. Isn't there a

20 sliding scale of severity of drunk, where if a police officer

21 would know it and would continue to insist that the person

22 perform physical activity of which they were on notice that it

23 would likely cause harm, theoretically, on a certain set of 24 facts, would it state a cause of action?

25 MS. FRIEDLINE: I don't disagree with that.

1 THE COURT: Okay. If that would, though, if

2 somewhere on the sliding continuum that would state a set of

3 facts, and if for purposes of the qualified immunity analysis

4 the test is what a reasonable police officer essentially would

5 have known the constitutional lay of the law land was, and

6 recognizing that there doesn't have to be perfect symmetry

7 between situations, but you can reasonably interpolate what

8 might happen, why wouldn't Kneipp, at least in theory, put an
_____

9 officer on notice in a case like this, constitutional notice?

10 MS. FRIEDLINE: I don't believe there is a

11 reasonable parallel that can be drawn by a reasonable officer

12 between those two cases. Remember what Kneipp did not say.
_____

13 Kneipp focused on the conduct that was violative of the
_____

14 Constitution. Involved a series of events, and over and over

15 again the Third Circuit says the conduct that we're stressing

16 here is separating the husband and wife, separating her from 17 the protector. Sending him home, detaining her, and sending 18 her unescorted home in the cold while she's drunk. The case is 19 not saying when you come across somebody that is really drunk,

20 you better put them on the ground, you better put them in the 21 car, you better not do a test. That's happening in that case,

22 she is left to lean against the car for sometime and that's not 23 the conduct being challenged or criticized.

24 THE COURT: I have just one other question for you.

25 By your lights are there any disputed issues of material fact

1 in this case?

2 MS. FRIEDLINE: Of issues that are material to these 3 claims in my sense, your Honor, there are not. The video 4 essentially establishes --

5 THE COURT: Essentially, the video establishes the 6 undisputed factual scenario. And so it really becomes a pure 7 question of law, doesn't it, as to whether or not that conduct, 8 as reflected in the video, rises to the level sufficient to 9 support a claim?

10 MS. FRIEDLINE: Yes, your Honor. The issue is this 11 officer's conduct in that 10-minute timeframe. It's not his 12 mind set, it's not his intent whether he was out to get this 13 guy or whether he thought the world of him is irrelevant. It 14 is his conduct which can be viewed and this court can determine 15 as a matter of law that no reasonable fact finder could see 16 that.

17 THE COURT: All right, let me hear from your 18 counterpart.

19 MS. FRIEDLINE: Thank you, your Honor.

20 MR. FEINSTEIN: Good morning.

21 THE COURT: Good morning.

22 MR. FEINSTEIN: Your Honor, I think to look at this 23 case --

24 THE COURT: Which I quite literally have.

25 MR. FEINSTEIN: I think you have to look at this

11

1 case in light of the fact of why we even have a DUI statute in 2 the first place. The DUI statute exists to protect the public 3 in general and the driver from dangers to himself. In light of 4 that, the duty upon the police officer when he's investigating 5 a DUI, it has to be done for the purposes of protecting the 6 public in general and the person who is the suspect in this 7 case. And, your Honor's questions have really pointed out the 8 deficiencies in the motion for summary judgment. When you look 9 at the case and the facts, and I understand, I know what the 10 tape shows. But when I took the trooper's deposition, the 11 trooper specifically stated yes, he was aware of the 12 possibility that this person could fall. Subjectively 13 dismissed that possibility as being not realistic. And that 14 was in light of the fact that -- when I was questioning him and 15 in his report, there was numerous indicia of significant 16 intoxication, including disheveled appearance, all of the 17 others, slurred speech, unsteady on the feet. Manifestations 18 of being intoxicated, but it goes even further in this case.

19 The suspect, the plaintiff in this case, was too intoxicated to 20 even perform the field sobriety tests. And one of them, one of 21 them wasn't even attempted. One of them, the trooper 22 testified, that the person could not, the plaintiff could not 23 understand the instructions. And the third one he couldn't 24 perform at all. And in light of this, he allowed Mr. Bill to 25 walk to the car unescorted while he went to get a preliminary

12

1 breathalyzer test because he wasn't sure yet, he meaning
2 Trooper Sternby, wasn't sure yet whether he had probable cause
3 to arrest this individual, who was too intoxicated to perform 4 the field sobriety tests. He was more concerned with the 5 validity of the arrest than he was --

6 THE COURT: I don't see, in the grand scheme of 7 things maybe that's a factor to crank in, but I really don't 8 see a concern on the part of an officer as to the integrity of 9 the evidence that is being gathered, as to how the evidence is 10 being gathered that might impact on a potential arrest is 11 really cutting necessarily one way or the other. Let me ask 12 you this, cutting right to the heart of this thing. We have a 13 fellow who's done about 200 arrests, DUI arrests, as I remember 14 the record.

15 MR. FEINSTEIN: Yes.

16 THE COURT: And, presumably, of various degrees of 17 intoxication, one can assume. He has never had anyone in 18 almost Redwood tree like fashion just stand there and fall 19 over. Recognizing that constitutional torts aren't supposed to 20 be converted, 1983 constitutional torts aren't really supposed 21 to be easily converted or converted at all into simple common 22 law negligence, tell me, as I look at the tape -- within the 23 constitutional meaning, what is constitutionally shocking to 24 me -- don't you really have at best, if you have it, a simple 25 negligence case here?

13

1 MR. FEINSTEIN: No, your Honor, I don't think so.
2 I also would like to touch back because I disagree concerning

3 the integrity of the evidence.

4 THE COURT: All right, tell me about that?

5 MR. FEINSTEIN: And I think that's incredibly 6 important in this case. Because it goes back again to what is 7 a police officer supposed to do.

8 THE COURT: Let me flip it around and then you can 9 come back and answer my question as to precisely what was so 10 grossly negligent that it should shock my judicial bones, so to 11 speak. I guess the one way to ask it is to ask you this. What 12 did he do that or what didn't he do that he should have done 13 that if he would have done, we wouldn't be here?

14 MR. FEINSTEIN: He should have escorted Mr. Bill to 15 the police car and placed him in the back of the car for his 16 own safety. If he had done that, we wouldn't be here today.
17 Absolutely, positively would not be here today. And the only 18 reason why he didn't do that, what he justifies is, he believed 19 that he needed to do a preliminary breathalyzer test. Which is 20 shocking to me. Here's a person who has had over 200 arrests 21 for DUI, according to his own testimony, and doesn't know when 22 he has probable cause. Of what value is a preliminary 23 breathalyzer test when it's not even admissible.

24 THE COURT: Just parenthetically, most people don't

25 complain that they were arrested too slowly, most complain that

14

1 they were arrested too quickly.

2 MR. FEINSTEIN: Most people aren't in this 3 circumstance, your Honor. And this is a person who was so 4 intoxicated, he doesn't remember the night, in addition to 5 striking his head --

6 THE COURT: I understand he doesn't remember the 7 night at all?

8 MR. FEINSTEIN: He doesn't remember the night at 9 all. But he was so intoxicated that he couldn't do the field 10 sobriety tests.

11 THE COURT: It's neither here nor there in terms of 12 this motion to be sure, but it's a matter of curiosity, what 13 were the nature of his injuries and how severe were they?

14 MR. FEINSTEIN: He had fractured ribs, a closed head 15 injury, with cognitive dysfunction.

16 THE COURT: All right. To this day does he suffer 17 from the residuals of the closed head injury?

18 MR. FEINSTEIN: That's a difficult question to 19 answer. Because I have not spoken to anybody who knew him

20 prior to the time of the events. And he hasn't seen a doctor 21 since -- within a few months of the accident.

22 THE COURT: He actually cracked his head open when 23 he hit the ground?

24 MR. FEINSTEIN: I believe that it may have been a 25 gash, but it was described as a closed head injury. But the 15

1 fact also is that he had had a previous head injury. So there
2 are memory problems. But, as I sit here today, I'm not going 3 to make a representation to the court that I'm sure that his 4 residual memory problems didn't preexist the incident.

5 THE COURT: Now, on this record and on these facts,
6 hypothetically, if I were to declare, because there are no
7 material facts in dispute here, it seems to me someone is going 8 to win, someone is going to lose. I don't think there's a 9 cross-motion for summary judgment on your behalf?

10 MR. FEINSTEIN: There isn't, your Honor. But I will 11 also say that I disagree as to whether there are material facts 12 in dispute. I believe there is one very key material fact in 13 dispute.

14 THE COURT: What would that be?

15 MR. FEINSTEIN: And that would be the intent of the 16 trooper. And that has to be decided by a jury. The court 17 cannot rule on the intent of the trooper at the time based upon 18 what he seen. The court can rule upon the observations, but 19 the court cannot rule as to what the subjective intent was at 20 the time. And the only person who has testified about the 21 subjective intent is the trooper, and the jury has the right to 22 evaluate that credibility. And has the obligation to evaluate 23 that credibility.

24 THE COURT: Run that by me again. Are you saying as 25 I determine whether or not this is a conscience-shocking

16

1 situation, that I do not bring to bear on it an objective
2 standard, that it is a subjective standard, I don't think 3 that's correct?

4 MR. FEINSTEIN: I want to be clear about what I'm 5 saying. If your Honor is of the opinion that the conduct that 6 he sees on the tape does not shock the conscience, that is an

7 objective standard with regard to that. However, as it 8 pertains to issues of gross negligence, that deals specifically 9 with the mind set and the intent of the parties engaged in the 10 activities.

11 THE COURT: Well, I thought -- we'll look at it, 12 I'm not saying you're right or you're wrong, but I thought that 13 negligence law or tort law, if you will, as I remember from 14 first year torts, employs the reasonable man standard. So it's 15 not the reasonable man, in other words, the defendant, it's 16 the, broad, reasonable man. It doesn't matter what the person 17 is thinking because even if they were thinking what they 18 thought was correct, they could still be negligent, couldn't 19 they?

20 MR. FEINSTEIN: That would be correct. However, the 21 jury should have the opportunity to decide whether Trooper
22 Sternby -- well, actually let me backtrack just a second. I 23 want to go back to the testimony that Trooper Sternby had when 24 I asked him with regard to his knowledge of the possibility 25 that Mr. Bill would fall. Now, in that testimony Trooper

1 Sternby said yeah, I knew it was possible, but I really kind of 2 discounted it.

3 THE COURT: Right, that's pretty much the upshot of 4 what he said.

5 MR. FEINSTEIN: Right. The jury has the opportunity 6 or should have the opportunity to say whether that statement, 7 whether that conduct right there, is shocking in light of all 8 the other evidence in the case. And whether the trooper should 9 have been more cognizant of the risk of falling and injuring, 10 of Mr. Bill falling and injuring himself, in light of all the 11 other evidence in the case. And that's the possibility where 12 the jury can come back and then say, you know what, he's full 13 of nonsense, he should have known that there was a significant 14 risk, never should have discounted it and that shocks my 15 conscience that he was more concerned about the validity of the 16 arrest than he was when he discounted the possibility that this 17 person is going to fall and hurt themselves.

18 THE COURT: If you're right, from a constitutional 19 sense about this particular fact scenario, wouldn't I
20 potentially be creating a situation where every state trooper 21 who makes a DUI stop is going to tiptoe around the issue, be

22 afraid to do anything other than put someone, who they believe 23 to be intoxicated, immediately in the back of their trooper car 24 without any meaningful ability to exercise the type of 25 discretion on the scene that people expect?

18

1 MR. FEINSTEIN: The answer to that question is 2 probably yes. But keep in mind, keep two things in mind. As 3 long as the police officer has a reasonable belief that the 4 person is intoxicated, they have a right to ask for a blood 5 test, which every licensed driver has the obligation to submit 6 to. And also under the Motor Vehicle Code as it's written, you
7 do not need field sobriety tests in order to get a conviction 8 for DUI. If in the estimation of a subjective belief, even in 9 the subjective belief of the police officers, if the person is 10 too intoxicated to drive, they can still get a conviction.
11 Now, are we per chance having a risk that field sobriety tests 12 may be outlawed based upon the outcome of this case, that is 13 conceivably possible. But under the Kneipp case, it's clear 14 that when somebody does come across somebody who is in an 15 intoxicated state, the police officer is on notice of the fact

16 that there are constitutional rights that may be implicated

17 here.

18 THE COURT: Let me ask you two other questions.

19 If your fellow, your client in this case, rather than having

20 fallen as he did without being held on to, he was attended in a

21 broad sense, the police officer walked him up, but he wasn't

22 holding on to him. Assume for the sake of my question that the 23 officer and he were standing at the front of the car, the 24 officer had his hand, holding him by his arm to stabilize him,

25 and yet he suddenly tipped over and pried loose of the 19

1 officer's grasp, given the suddenness of the fall, would you

2 still be here?

3 MR. FEINSTEIN: It's unlikely under that scenario

4 that we would be here. At least under those circumstances, the 5 police officer would have taken some precautions to make sure

6 that he hadn't fallen. But there were none taken in this case.

7 In light of the fact that there was clear and severe

8 intoxication. Now, I agree that the tape doesn't show somebody

9 staggering all over the place and falling --

10 THE COURT: Arguably, in the same sense that defense 11 counsel indicated that it's better for her side that your 12 plaintiff is the plaintiff, it would be better for you in a 13 sense if the other driver was the plaintiff, in terms of what I 14 saw on the tape, wouldn't it, in terms of advanced notice, 15 arguably?

16 MR. FEINSTEIN: I would agree with that, that the 17 passenger appeared to be less stable on the feet.

18 THE COURT: In fact, the officer grabbed him
19 literally and pulled him to the side.

20 MR. FEINSTEIN: I would agree with that. But the 21 one thing the tape doesn't show, the one thing you'll never be 22 able to see on the tape and the jury will never be able to see 23 on the tape, is the real interaction between the two because 24 there's no audio and, also, there's really not a closeup on Mr.
25 Bill's face until he approaches the car.

20

1 THE COURT: Very short there, too.

2 MR. FEINSTEIN: And that was very short.

3 THE COURT: I saw his face as he was falling over,

4 basically.

5 MR. FEINSTEIN: Your Honor, actually I want to go
6 back to one of your questions, I want to change my answer.

7 THE COURT: All right, you can.

8 MR. FEINSTEIN: The reason I want to change my 9 answer is when we're talking about the damage that would be 10 done to field sobriety tests. Because I am concerned about the 11 validity of field sobriety tests. Not only because I 12 drive the roads, but I also do criminal defense work.

13 THE COURT: You have a two-edge sword here.

14 MR. FEINSTEIN: Yes, I do. And I am concerned about 15 it, though. I will tell you that in this particular case the 16 problem occurred with Trooper Sternby after the field sobriety 17 tests were attempted. The reason why that becomes important is 18 going back to your question, you were asking about people 19 tiptoeing around these things --

20 THE COURT: Right.

21 MR. FEINSTEIN: Okay. In the scenario that was 22 given here, may not be the typical scenario that you have on a 23 DUI stop. When the police officer gives the field sobriety 24 test, if the person is capable of understanding any of the 25 instructions, capable of at least attempting the field sobriety

21

1 tests, that's a different situation than what we have here,
2 where the person couldn't understand the instructions, couldn't 3 do the field sobriety tests even at all. So going back to one 4 of the comments that you made to defense counsel, we're talking 5 about a sliding scale here. When you get to the sliding scale 6 where a person is so intoxicated that they can't understand the 7 instructions, at that point the police officer or the trooper 8 has to have a different set of behavior than otherwise. And 9 that's where the difference comes in. So if the trooper -- 10 that constitutional issue has to come in, as soon as the 11 trooper is on notice that this person is so intoxicated that 12 they can't even perform the field sobriety tests. And I know 13 the court doesn't seem as concerned as I am about the fact the 14 trooper was concerned about the validity of the arrest. But, 15 quite frankly, that shocks me because, as I said, this is a 16 person who has had over 200 arrests and doesn't understand what 17 probable cause is --

18 THE COURT: This would be true too, though, wouldn't

19 it. If your position was taken to its logical extreme, as soon 20 as-- in many cases, as soon as a police officer became 21 convinced that someone was quite intoxicated, they would then 22 abandon the physical part of the physical agility test, losing 23 part of their potential evidence that they would otherwise use 24 and have to rely exclusively on a blood test, which are always 25 and legitimately sometimes susceptible to defense attack?

22

1 MR. FEINSTEIN: Except the fact that the testimony
2 of the police officer in and of itself that says this person 3 was too intoxicated to perform the tests, could and should be 4 sufficient to, if believed by a jury, could be and would be 5 enough to get a conviction in a DUI case. And the blood test, 6 although the way the blood test is taken can be attacked and 7 how long it's done after the arrest can be attacked. Blood 8 tests themselves, assuming that it's accurate, is conclusive 9 under the statute. In fact, most people, as an aside, most 10 people don't understand that there are two different sections 11 to the statute that you can be convicted on.

12 THE COURT: I don't think we need to get too far

13 down there.

14 MR. FEINSTEIN: I don't want to go too far down the 15 road, but you can be convicted under two different theories; 16 one is the subjective belief of the police officer and the 17 other is the conclusive presumption created by the blood test.

18 THE COURT: All right, I hope I gave you your moneys
19 worth, thank you for making the trip.

20 MR. FEINSTEIN: Thank you, your Honor.

21 THE COURT: Is there anything else you want to say 22 to me?

23 MS. FRIEDLINE: Yes, your Honor. I would ask you to 24 revisit some of your opinion in the Neuburger case.

25 THE COURT: On what point?

23

1 MS. FRIEDLINE: In that case you cited to several 2 cases cautioning against engaging in retroactive speculation
3 about what conduct should have taken place by an officer. That 4 was done in a Fourth Amendment argument --

5 THE COURT: That wasn't a state-created danger case, 6 though?

7 MS. FRIEDLINE: Well, it was that issue there, but 8 what I'm saying is, what is even more compelling here, under 9 the Fourth Amendment analysis you're looking at reasonableness.
10 Here we're looking at arbitrariness.

11 THE COURT: That was the case where the suicidal 12 lady was shot by the state trooper, is that right?

13 MS. FRIEDLINE: Yes. And this case plays into are 14 we going to revisit and reevaluate with hindsight that the 15 officer should have grabbed his arm at some point, that the 16 officer shouldn't have let him stand --

17 THE COURT: Well, he says if I read the transcript, 18 which I did look at his transcript, he said the thought crossed 19 my mind that he could fall, but I thought it wasn't likely.
20 What about his subjective intent?

21 MS. FRIEDLINE: That is not -- your Honor, if 22 subjective intent is relevant here, then his good intentions
23 should be a defense. And that's not the case in a 1983 action 24 or in a negligence action, as you stated. What matters is his 25 conduct and what matters is your Honor's ability to evaluate

1 that conduct on an objective standard. But if we're going to 2 say his intent, that he didn't care, whatever, matters, well, 3 his intent that he cared and was trying to do a good job
4 matters, too. That unfortunately for me is not a defense, so I 5 don't think it can be the other way. Thank you.

6 THE COURT: All right, let's go off the record here, 7 thank you.

8 (Discussion held off the record.)
